

Palisades Volunteers Clear Thorny Bushes on #101

Volunteers gathered on a beautiful evening, despite rumors of rain, to tackle winter snow damage to the very thorny Hawthorne bushes along Trail #101. Chris Hicks directed the work from behind his extra long barred chain saw. Mike Reznicek worked his saw along with Chris as Linda Reznicek, her son and three of their friends dragged the limbs from the trail. Vic and Robbi Castleberry worked clippers clearing back underbrush and hauling it off the trail.

There was enough sunlight for a snack and celebrations when the work task was finished. Crackers, Cheese, home made desserts were enjoyed by the volunteers.

Take a Hike to see the hard work accomplished by this intrepid group for your enjoyment.

The Palisades Neighborhood Organization works so you can enjoy the beauty and trails of Palisades.
